Each week London Life will publish a comprehensive entertainment guide for seven days from Saturday to the following Friday (the dates on the cover). It is not intended to be a critical guide. In most sections we supply full information, leaving readers to select for themselves whatever interests them. When the information is selective this will be stated. As an additional aid to readers various critics will mark those entertainments which they personally recommend with one, two or three stars. In some instances these stars are tentative. Entries in this guide are not paid for. Individuals or organizations wishing to appear in the guide are invited to post full information to Entertainment Guide, P.O. Box 166, 11 New Fetter Lane, EC 4

Director/Author/ Star comment	AMANDA GRINLING: It is a most rewarding play, partly serious and partly comedy which I enjoy dcing and which makes it more fun. I also think it is more interesting than the usual legal drama because it moves out of the courtroom	AMANDA BARRIE: It is the most enjoyable part I've ever played, it's funny—magical—romantic. The barefoot jeans bit and the dressed-up bit is rather me and I love the balloons. I love them every night
Critic's comment	HAROLD HOBSON (THE SUNDAY TIMES): The beginning—an unfair judge with a nagging conscience—is fine; the courtroom scene first rate; the amiable reunion of quarrelling judge and urbanely insolent advocate are amusing. But the mystery on which the play unhappily concentrates is ludicrous in itself and in its solution	W A DARLINGTON (THE DAILY TELEGRAPH); An obvious attempt to fill our theatre's desperate need for something light to laugh at. It is one of those silly little pieces which give actors parts that they can play with enjoyment. Its strongest attractions are that it brings Dennis Price back to the stage and that it gives Amanda Barrie the chance to give a very funny and charming performance	JOHN HIGGINS (FINANCIAL TIMES); Michael Flanders Donald Swann an Whitstable Natives Arbroath Smokies, New Palladium Sh Mick Jagger and et meetings at the At Pally. Director/Author/ Star comment	BERYL REID: When Michael Codron sent me the script I read it and thought "Ugh! This is difficult," so I went ahead and did it	INGRID BERGMAN: I wanted to play the part because I understand her. I know exactly how she felt. That is what women are like. They want to be happy and they want to be loved	RAY COONEY: I think it will run
Critie's comment	W A DARLINGTON (THE DAILY TELEGRAPH): A test case. For the first time on the British stage homo- sexual characters are presented simply as people. They are intended neither to shock nor to point a moral. How will the public react in this novel situation?	THE TIMES: The play is the story of blundering innocence let loose in a house of routine sophistication and stagnant dignity. The ironies are gentle and superficial, limited as they are to knocking the mechanics of the emotional chess game while the emotions themselves remain sacrosanct	HAROLD HOBSON (THE SUNDAY THES The characters in play come out of conventional come but they are given insane twist. Diana Rigg says SWAPL* separates the men from the boys

Diana Rigg wears South West African Persian Lamb because it looks spectacularly right with all kinds of clothes and is weightlessly warm. When she wears it, she feels all-female. That's why men like her in it.

The secret of choosing South West African Persian Lamb is soon revealed. It's lighter than any other Persian Lamb. Has a prettier curl. Feels softer, silkier. So do you.

If you can't afford a whole coat of South West African Persian Lamb (though that's cheaper than you think), work up to it gradually. Have it on a collar, a cuff, a lapel. A touch of it adds little to your bill, lots to looks.

For information about where to buy this jacket and other ravishing SWAPL coats, write to SWAPL Information, 40 Berkeley Square, London, W.1. And don't forget to ask your furrier about deferred terms.

RESTAURANTS

Selective restaurant guide especially compiled by Neil Rhind, Editorial Manager of the Good Food Club. The Club's Good Food Guide (published by Consumers' Association and Cassell) has 1,600 entries covering the whole country. In this weekly section London Life will list and describe most of the reputable London restaurants in the course of the year. The name of the proprietor, where given, follows immediately after the telephone number C.S.—Closed Sundays

WEST END

BENTLEY'S, 11 Swallow St, off Piccadilly, W 1 (REG 6210). W A, D J and R G Bentley. Dinner 5 30-11. C.S. Now is the time to go to Bentley's. Because there is an R in the month and because Bentley's have their own oyster beds. They also have an Oyster Bar where they will sell oysters to you from 12s to 17s 6d the half-dozen. In the bar and the upstairs restaurant there are other sorts of fish and shellfish from about 7s 6d to 25s. The lobster bisque (5s) is very good. Wines from about 20s; some by the glass. Black Velvet, draught Guinness, of course

BIAGI'S, 39 Upper Berkeley St, W 1 (PAD 0394). Gianpiero Biagi. Dinner 6-11 45. A trattoria decorated with a nautical touch, though I hope they never have need to use the life-belts. The menu is long, Italian, and not wildly dear. The plats du jour are from 9s 6d to 12s 6d (including vegetables) and the à la carte main dishes cost about the same but without the garnishings. Peperoni all' olio (4s 6d), moules marinières or the lasagne should be good starters; there are saltimbocca and scallopine alla crema for later on. The zabaglione or the sambucca would make a suitable finish to the meal. Mostly Italian wines; carafes at 9s and 15s, by the glass 2s 6d

CORDON BLEU RESTAURANT, 31 Marylebone La, W1 (WEL 2931 & 3889). Rosemary Hume. Coffee 10-11 30; tea 3 45-5 30. C.S. and in evenings. All the cooking here is done by graduates of the Cordon Bleu Cookery School. So really this is a shop window for the school but a window for real shopping and not just for fun. The soups and egg dishes are good starters, the cold table really first class with main dishes about 10s. The sweets are outstanding. Wines by the carafe from 12s 6d, by the glass from 3s. They only take bookings for noon and 12.15 and it gets very crowded by 1 o'clock

CRANKS' SALAD TABLE, 22 Carnaby St, W1 (GER 9431). Daphne Swan, K and D Canter. Meals served continuously from 10 a m to 8 30 p m. Closed Sat & Sun. If you buy your clothes in Carnaby Street, and even if you don't, Cranks' pure foods restaurant is a splendid place for lunch. All vegetarian: home-made soups, fresh and imaginative salads (two for 2s 6d, three for 3s 6d, five for 5s 6d), and an excellent selection of cheeses. Some rather original sweets and cakes. Dandelion as well as Cona coffee, and though some of the other drinks have pretty strange names, none is alcoholic. You should be able to eat quite well for 7s 6d. Afterthoughts: tipping is discouraged and the tinned music isn't pop

FONTAINEBLEAU WINE RESTAURANT, 3 Northumberland Av, WC 2 (WHI 1425). M Lejeune. Dinner 5 30-10 30. C.S. This rather dimly-lit basement restaurant has one of the most interesting wine lists in London—more than 200 French wines, all in half-bottles. The cheese board hasn't quite so many varieties as the wine list has, but it tries very nobly. So it is for the wine and cheese and not so much the food—which is perfectly all right and will cost about 20s a head—that one should make the pilgrimage to Northumberland Av. Being only in half-bottles the wines aren't quite so cheap as they appear at first glance. Upstairs is an ordinary coffee bar which stays open until 11 p m

GAY HUSSAR, 2 Greek St. W1 (GER 6973). Victor Sassie. Dinner 6 30-11. C.S. According to some expatriates this is the most authentic Hungarian restaurant we have in London, even though the menu has dishes from other parts of central and eastern Europe. The Hungarian hors d'oeuvre (6s 6d). Bulgarian mixed salad (4s), the various pancakes (about 10s 6d) and the pork chops with green peppers and cream should make a change from scampi and fillet steak. There is a very good value 10s 6d table d'hôte lunch. Wines by the carafe 12s 6d; glass 3s

LYON'S CARVERIES: CUMBERLAND HOTEL, Marble Arch, W1 (AMB 1234). C.S. REGENT PALACE HOTEL, Piccadilly, W1 (REG 7000). C.S. STRAND CORNER HOUSE, Charing X. WC 2 (WHI 7373). Here is the opportunity not only to eat as much as you can hold for 18s or so, but also a chance to have a go at carving the joints yourself. There is a short list of starters: soup, grapefruit, melon and such, brought by the waitress. After this you have free run of half a dozen hot and cold joints from which you can hack as much as you like, as often as you like. The vegetables are not up to the standard of the meats. Sound wine in bottle and carafe. Check times of lunch and dinner before setting out—the three places are by no means similar in this respect

MARTINEZ SPANISH RESTAURANT, 25 Swallow St, W1 (REG 5066 & 4921). F Amhurst. Dinner 6-midnight. The Martinez is one of the few really authentic Spanish restaurants in London, and some dedicated lovers of Spain think the decor is as realistic as the food. It is sensible to eat the Iberian specialities: paella Valenciana (15s 6d), cold gazpacho (4s), inkfish in their own ink (8s 6d). Long list of sherries from 3s 6d, and Spanish wines from 16s; in carafes for 13s 6d, by the glass 3s

MON PLAISIR, 21 Monmouth St. WC 2 (TEM 7243). J C Viala. No lunches. Dinner 6-10 30. This very popular place looks like a Paris bistro, and just like a Paris bistro serves good French bourgeois food. You must book and you must not be late in claiming your table or you may be turned away. The plat du jour (about 12s 6d) is worth trying, though the entreofteMonPlaisir (11s 6d), boeuf Bourguignonne (9s 6d) and the rognons de veau Madère deserve investigation. Beer and wine licence; wine in carafes for 10s 6d, 6s 6d the half

PASTICCERIA AMALFI, 31 Old Compton St, W1 (GER 7284). Mancisi Carconi. Dinner 6-midnight. A small, busy, cheerful and cheap Italian café where the lasagne (4s 6d), cannelloni gratinati al' Amalfitana (4s 6d) and the tagliatelle (4s) are as good as anywhere in London and much cheaper. There are standard Italian main dishes from about 5s 6d to 10s 6d. The pastries, and the ice cream naturally, are very good. Wines by the glass 2s 6d.

PIZZA HOUSE, 56 Goodge St, W1 (MUS 9590). Alfredo Olivelli. Dinner 530-11. C.S. lunch. A friendly place that never seems to change over the years, though the prices have moved up slightly since I first went there in 1958. The pastas, the pizza pies (of course) from 4s 6d to 6s are excellent value and reliable. Food always hot; service always quick; coffee (Espresso) strong. Wines from 12s 6d and by the glass 2s 3d

AU SAVARIN, 8 Charlotte St, W1 (MUS 7134). Mr Chris, Mr Theo. Dinner 6-11. C.S. The cost of a meal here won't be small but it will be good value. The menu is large, the cooking good, and the helpings more than enough for normal people. The pâté (5s 6d), scampi Provençale and taramosalata (4s 6d) are good to begin with. Follow them with escalopes (Au Savarin or Bel Paese 10s 6d), or the kidneys in red wine. Good sweet trolley. The wine list is not very cheap; it does include 10 Greek wines from 22s 6d if you have acquired the taste for these; others by the carafe for 15s, by the glass 4s 6d

SHEEKEY'S, 29-31 St Martin's Ct, WC 2 (TEM 4118). J Sheekey Ltd. Meals served 12 15-3 30 (Sat 12 15-3). C.S. A fish restaurant off the southern end of Charing X Road. It is very crowded, for the tables are set rather too close together and you might have to share yours with others. Still, the fish is worth it. Good helpings of stewed eels (6s), dressed crab (8s), lobster soup (6s). The rest of the seafood is steamed: sole (12s 6d), turbot (11s 6d) and salmon (16s) and others, served with either lobster (1s 6d) or parsley (1s) sauce. No sweets, only cheese. Good white wines from 18s 6d and upwards; by the glass 4s

STONE'S CHOP HOUSE, Panton St, SW'I (WHI 9037). Dinner 6-12. C.S. This is from the same stable as Simpson's-in-the-Strand and is similarly a traditional English restaurant, though it has less atmosphere because the building was put up only in 1963. Roasts (beef. 13s 6d, mutton 12s 6d) from the trolley, steak and kidney pudding (9s 6d) and various grills (12s 6d-16s 6d), can provide a not too expensive lunch. Wine list better than Simpson's; carafes from 13s 6d, by the glass 3s to 7s 6d (Ch. d'Yquem); Bass on draught

Queen St, W1 (MAY 3561-3). Mario Cassandro, Franco Lagotola. No lunch Sat. Dinner 7-midnight. C.S. So often the words "dancing until 3 a m" mean dismal food at absurd prices and tired service, but the Tiberio is the exception: the food is better than at most restaurants in Rome, and the prices are in keeping with the extremely elegant, modern decor. Artichoke souffié (10s 6d), tagliatelle (9s 6d) to start with; whole duck braised in honey and curaçao (46s 6d for two), or qualis cooked on a spit with Roman salad (27s 6d) are very good. There are the more ordinary veal dishes from 15s 6d. All the wines are Italian and estate bottled, nothing under 27s 6d

TRATTORIA TERRAZZA 19 Romilly St, W1 (GER 8991 & 3334). As Tiberio. Dinner 6-12. This bustling southern Italian restaurant now has four dining rooms in operation yet is always full. The cooking is influenced by the cuisine of the Amalfi coast: egg and kidney in Marsala (5s 6d), zuppa Terrazza (3s 6d) are good to begin with. For a main course the petto di pollo Sorpresa (15s 6d), calamari all' Luciana (ragout of baby octopus 10s 6d) and the grilled scampi are very good. Sweet pancake or caramelized orange for afterwards. Carafes of wine 13s 6d, by the glass 3s 6d

THE WHITE TOWER, 1
Percy St, W1 (MUS 8141).
J Stais. Dinner 6 45-11. C.S.
The White Tower has long been one of London's most distinguished restaurants. Its menu is mostly Greek, and it is this type of food you must eat here. Taramasolata, avgolemono, stuffed vine leaves (dolmades) for the hors d'oeuvre; for a main course moussaka (18s 6d but enormous), pilaff des fruits de mer (21s), or shashlik at the same price. The atmosphere is most agreeable and customers are never hurried, whatever the time of day.
Large, well-chosen wine list;
Greek house wine 18s 6d;
carafes 21s

KENSINGTON & CHELSEA

ANDIREA'S, 8-9 Blacklands Tce, SW3 (KNI 2919). A Antonio. Dinner 6 30-11 15. C.S. A quiet place, comfortable and relaxing. Andrea's doesn'tattemptany curiosities in its cooking but sticks sensibly to the dishes it can do well. The entrecote Marseillaise and the chicken à la Kiev (both at 14s 6d) are consistently good, the veal dishes (Chasseur and Milanaise 15s 6d and 13s 6d) and the pastas are likely to please. The wines are interesting but dear; carafes for 14s, 7s 6d the half; wine by the glass 3s 6d

AU FIN BEC, 100 Draycott Av, SW3 (KNI 3600). Mr Corte. Dinner 730-11. C.S. If you have strong objections to seeing your food being prepared and cooked, then this small French restaurant is not for you, for only a green glass window is between you and the kitchen. The 12s 6d table d'hôte at lunch is good value; the à la carte is limited to their own specialities (ask them what's on): oeufs Bénédictine (5s 6d), sole Grand Duc (13s 6d), suprême de volaille à l'Estragon (13s 6d) and other things have been "on" in the recent past. A short, well-chosen wine list; carafes 18s, 9s 6d the half; by the glass 4s 6d

CHINESE LANTERN, 4
Thackeray St, W 8 (WES 4881&PRO 7333 in the morning). Mr Looi. Dinner only 6 30-midnight. Closed Chinese New Year. This tiny eating house recreates a Festival Dinner in a Chinese home which is as much a celebration as a dinner out. There is no choice and the meal which will be brought to you by the Chinese waitress will go as follows: a soup cooked on your table in little charcoal burners, a series of small dishes of pork, scampi and chicken with the usual bean sprouts, rice and noodles, then a meat savoury in paper, and afterwards lychees. All the time there is as much green tea as you want.
This will cost about 26s including tea, and, of course, you must book. Don't go too often as the menu doesn't change very frequently. Take your own wine, if you must

JAMSHID, 6 Glendower Pl, SW 7 (KNI 2309 & KEN 8045). Mr Jamshid. Dinner 6 30-11. This is rather more expensive than most Indian restaurants but it is also rather better than most of them. Even so, it is still possible to have a good and varied meal for less than £1 per head. Kashmiri chicken kebab (11s 9d) is a splendid dish and the mutton curry (7s 6d) is well prepared and properly cooked. If you like mild curry try the bhoona chicken (10s 9d) if you have an asbestos mouth the chicken vindaloo (at the same price) should be hot enough. There are no half-portions here, so don't order too much and be prepared to wait a little. Wines in carafe 14s 9d; the lager at 3s is a much better idea

LA TOQUE BLANCHE, 21 Abingdon Rd, W 8 (WES 5832). G Lourilleron. Dinner 7-10 46. A small, charming and often crowded restaurant with a highly skilled chef/proprietor who is a dab hand at soupe aux poissons, crèpe de fruits de mer (6s 6d), civet de lièvre (12s), langoustines à ma façon (13s), and ballotine de volaille Bressane (12s 6d). The cheeses are exceptional. The waiting is expert and supervised by la Patronne. On the wine list is a special connoisseurs' section: about 30 bottles, costing over £2, and very strong on the better Burgundies

LE BEURRE FONDU, 1-3 Wilbraham Pl, SW1 (SL0) 6321). Rawles Ltd. Dinner 6-10. C.S. This has oak-panelling, and hasn't been open much more than a year. It is part of the Wilbraham Hotel. There is a table d'hôte menu for 14s 6i (lunch) and 19s 6d (dinner) which is changed every day; the d la carte menu is internationally ambitious. Wines are dear, but there are small 4s glasses

LE CARROSSE, 19 Elystan St, SW 3 (KNI 5248). Geoffrey Sharpe. Dinners only 7-11 30. C.S. This is an attractive, pleasant place that sensibly limits its menu, and does what it does do very well and with some individuality. Basically French but sufficiently cosmopolitan to offer lemon soup (3s 6d), poulet Albufera with wild rice (14s 6d) and lamb cutlets Shrewsbury with a piquant sauce (12s 6d). Try the crème brulée (5s 6d) or brandy snaps Chantilly afterwards. Wines by the carafe for about 12s; by the glass 3s 6d

LE MATELOT, 49 Elizabeth St, Eaton Square, SW 1 (SLO 1038). Hillary James. Dinner 6 30-11 30. C.S. lunch. A small informal restaurant with a Provencal bias to the menuratatouille (3s 6d), brochette de scampi Provencale with vegetables (15s), ris de veau Matelot (15s) and planked steak (17s 6d). Short wine list from 13s; by the glass 3s 6d

PARKES, 4 Beauchamp Pl. SW 3 (KEN 1390). Tom Benson, J L Chamberlain, Beecher Moore. Dinner only 7 30-11 30. C.S. Many people think this is the finest restaurant in London. It certainly takes a lot of beating and I wouldn't like to be asked to name its nearest rival. Tom Benson took over as chef when Ray Parkes died, and has carried on the restaurant's tradition with exceptional originality and distinction. You pay 3 for a four-course table d'hôte meal which may include sweetbreads with cognac, mussels in a mustard soup, baby turkey with cherries and chestnuts, a salad with Roquefort pâté, and finish with a peach filled with lemon sorbet. The service is good, the wine list small and rather dear. You will certainly have a memorable meal. You must book well in advance

SRI LANKA, 19 Childs St, SW 5 (FRE 4116). J C Silva. Meals 12-3; 6-midnight; Sat & Sun noon to midnight. Ceylonese food outside Ceylon is rare. and Sri Lanka is possibly Europe's only example of a Ceylonese restaurant. The dishes are Indian-sounding in name, and have a slightly milder taste, but it is worth asking the waiter to suggest a meal rather than flounder helplessly with the wrong sort of mixtures. might like to start with the risam (clear pepper soup 1s). then harak mas (a beef curry 5s), badapu isso (fried prawns 6s 6d) or pittu fish (6s 6d), with this you can have hot fried onion sambal or the milder pol sambala, both 1s. Kiri saha pani (curd with honey) for pudding. All wines under 20s; by the glass 2s 6d. Joss-sticks and candlelight

WOLFE'S, 11 Abingdon Rd, W1 (WES 6868). David Wolfe. Din-ner 7-1145. C.S. Wolfe's is a long, narrow restaurant, rather cramped but managing in spite of this to produce some of the most distinguished cooking in London. Mr Wolfe is a wine merchant, as well as a restaurateur. He is there in the evening and will give very sensible advice as to what to drink with the food he offers. The offerings have included lamb cutlets Ingrid (14s 6d), poussin au romarin (24s 6d for 2) 24 fresh snails for 34s and trout in red wine (14s 6d). It is the proprietor's avowed policy to shun tinned and frozen vegetables. Extensive wine list; carafes of Rioja (whole bottles!) 12s 6d; by the glass 3s

CAMDEN TOWN & ISLINGTON

BARQUE AND BITE, opp 15 Prince Albert Rd, Regent's Park (GUL 8137). Geoffrey Cassen. Dinner 7-12. Closed Sat lunch. It is interesting that mankind will go and eat meals in the bowels of the earth, at the top of a tower, or floating on the water and pay quite a lot of money for the privilege. No doubt the psychoanalysts have an enightening answer. If you are one of those who suffer from such compulsions the Barque and Bite will indulge your vice as well as feeding you pretty well. The pâté (5s 6d), an escalope in red wine sauce with cherries (14s 6d) and various ways with hare (from 11s 6d) are worth investigation. Wines from 13s 6d

LIGHT OF INDIA, 59 Park Rd, NW 1 (PAD 6753). S M Khan. Dinner 6-12. Someone once estimated that there were more than 300 Indian restaurants in London alone. Precious few of them have any individuality, but this friendly place is one of that few. The curries range from mild (chicken and mutton pulaos for 9s 6d and 8s 6d respectively) through medium (rhogan ghost 5s 6d) to the fercoious Bangalore phal mutton or chicken (5s 6d and 6s 6d). Wines from 14s 6d, by the glass 2s 6d; lagers on ice a much wiser choice

PORTOFINO, 39 Camden Passage, Islington, N 1 (CAN 0884). Consigli Aquilino. Dinner 6 midnight. C.S. A trattoria in a narrow passage containing a colony of antique shops. In decent weather you can lunch on the pavement, and it is useful for a candlelit dinner (if you likethatsortofthing)after the opera at Sadler's Wells. Cannelloni (5s 6d), chicken Sorpresa (13s 6d), veal Pizzaiola (9s 6d) are the things to order; the osso buco (8s) will repay investigation. Liqueur filled gâteaux for afters. Carafes of red and white Chianti for 12s; by the glass 2s 6d

SHAH RESTAURANT, 124 Drummond St, NW1 (EUS 1480). Mr Shah. Meals served from noon to 11 pm. Shah's has been most people's favourite Indian restaurant, at some time or the other, for what seems like donkey's years. It is still not very prepossessing, still cheap, and still a favourite with Indian students who want a nostalgic whilf of home cooking. There is the usual range of curries between 2s 6d and 8s 6d of which the chicken korma (6s), prawn and spinach curry (5s 6d) or the mutton vindaloo (a killer, 4s 6d) are good eating. They will fetch wine, if you want

BARON OF BEEF, Gutter La, Gresham St, EC 2 (MON 6961). Mecca Ltd. Dinner 5-9. Closed Sat & Sun. The sort of place London ought to be full of- and isn't. Traditional English food, properly cooked and served by a friendly well-run staff. Scotch sirloin carved from a trolley, Yorkshire pudding and horseradish sauce (12s 6d), steak and kidney pie for the same price, and white-bait with lemon (8s 6d). It is fitting that the vegetables include bubble and squeak (3s). The wine list is large and rather dear but there are carases and some by the glass.

GEORGE AND VULTURE, 3 Castle Ct. Cornhill, EC 3 (HOP 8000 Ext 351). John Gardner (London) Ltd. Lunch only 12-3. Closed Sat and Sun. So many of the really old, or Dickensian, pubs in the City serve such beastly food that it makes a change to recommend one that doesn't. The speciality here, on Thursdays during the oyster season (now, in fact), is Pickwick Pudding, made with steak, kidney oysters and a special season kidney. ing. This is 10s 6d; other popular dishes are cheapersteak (8s), chump chops (7s), mixed grill (7s 6d) and gammon rashers (7s 6d). Cheeses (the Stilton is good) and steamed puddings for afters. Rosé in carafe (9s 6d), quarter-bottles and named wines by the glass from 4s; Ind Coope on draught. The George gets very busy by 12 45, and bookings are taken only before 12 30 p m

SWEETING'S, 39 Queen Victoria St. EC 4 (CIT 3062). Lunch only 1130-3. Closed Sat & Sun. Sweeting's is now more than 100 years old, and the manager claims that his staff have been there almost as long. It is, of course, one of the best places in the City for sea food: smoked cod roe (3s), soused herring (6s), real turtle fish pie (9s 6d), grilled herrings in mustard sauce (6s 6d), fresh salmon fishcakes (8s 6d). There are a few meaty things if you don't want fish. White wines on a help-yourself basis at 3s the glass; champagne (6s 6d), Black Velvet (7s 6d). Bookings taken only for before 1 p m, or after 1 30 p m

PERIMETER

BERTORELLI'S, 23 Shepherd's Bush Gn, W 12 (SHE 2662). Bertorelli Brothers, Dinner 5 30-10. C.S. & M. evening.

This is a friendly, inexpensive and old-fashioned place, like its parent restaurant in Charlotte St. The food is Italian and the menu is long: raviolibolognese (3s 11d), osso buco (7s 3d), veal with peppers (8s 9d) and the jugged hare are some of their best dishes. The service is friendly and unhurried. Chianti in carafe 15s; by the glass 2s to 3s. An oasis in the desert of Shepherd's Bush.

BLOOM'S, 90 Whitechapel High St. Whitechapel E I (BIS 6001). Sidney Bloom. Meals from 11 a m-10 p m (M-Th); 11-1 p m (F); 11-midnight (Sun); closed Sat. Kosher food doesn't begin and end with salt beef though this is one of the things to be tried at this bustling and cheerful restaurant. Bloom's is probably the best place in London for stuffed kishka, and cholent (a sort of casserole with dumplings). The sweet and sour cabbage and the latkas (fried potato cakes) are rather nice. There are no bookings and it gets crowded, so go early and take your own wine.

COMENETTI, CASA 129 Rushey Gn. Catford, SE 6 (HIT 2314). Bortolo (Matthew) and Silvio (Oscar) Cominetti. Dinner 5 30-8 30 (Sunday, lunch only 12 30-2). The Cominettis came to London with the Italian opera companies who sang at the old Crystal Palace. The singers went home -their cooks didn't. And now their descendants still serve better food than most similar places in London. Escalope oggi (10s), scampi casa (11s), and sweetbreads Milanaise (8s 6d) are well worth trying. Wines by the carafe 6s 6d; by the glass 2s 6d.

CELLIER DU MIDI 28 Church Row, Hampstead, NW 3 (HAM 9998). Henri Saux. Diner only 630-11. C.S. This is a cellar, and the food does originate from the Midi. So if you want a truly authentic French regional meal it is worth ordering the casseroles: pot au feu (10s 6d) and boeuf Alaric (10s 6d); poulet Fontgrande (12s 6d) is very good, too. The soups, coffee and service are exactly as they ought to be. No licence; they will send out or you can bring your own for 3s corkage.

GOOD FRIENDS AND NEW FRIENDS 139 & 185 Salmon La, Limehouse, E 14 (EAS 5541 & 3366). C Cheung, Meals served from 12 noon to about 11 pm. If you want Chinese food at its best and its most authentic you must be prepared to make the journey to Limehouse. It will be well worth the trouble. Give them notice and try such specialities as the whole steamed mullet. whole stuffed duck, Chinese cheese and sausage, and the extraordinary melon soup. Even the more mundane dishes are a gastronomic revelation. A meal of extreme variety and satisfying proportions will cost about 15s to £1 per head. will No drinks; off-licence opposite Good Friends

GRAN SASSO 189a High St. Beckenham, Kent (BEC 0593). F and A di Gloacchino. Dinner 6-11 (Sun lunch 12-230; dinner 6-1030). This is good by London standards—it is extraordinary by Beckenham's. An Italian place with good pastas and a number of specialities from about 4s 6d to 12s 6d. About 30 Italian wines from about 16s; by the glass 2s 6d

London High Life investigator discovers the world's finest 'Dry Martini'

I said to this bartender:

"I want a very dry Dry Martini. Just let the shadow of the vermouth bottle fall across

So he filled his mixing glass with ice, poured on plenty of gin, waved the vermouth over it, stirred briskly, strained, expertly shaved a thin piece of lemon peel, pressed it over the drink and dived it in.

Everything seemed fine. I sipped. Cold enough. Dry in its way. But somehow not there. Couldn't place the fault; so paid up, drank up and tracked out.

I went to another bar. Plushy place. Girls to match. I nearly pulled up a couch. But the job came first. "I'm looking for the finest Dry Martini in London," I said. "Very dry. When you take up that vermouth, bow towards France, think Scrooge and reshelf it."

The ritual was expert. A London gin. The Frenchiest French. But a hint of sweetness curled my tongue. I didn't complain, just chalked up a black and went.

So next evening in a different place, I said: "George. Your name is George?"

"Yes, Sir," he answered.
"George," I said, "I am dedicated to discovering the best Dry Martini in London. So build me a large, very dry one, and leave the fruit salad for rabbits.'

I watched. He made all the right motions. A touch of Martini Dry vermouth. And a shaving of lemon, pinched so sharply that minute and invisible drops of oil wafted on to the cocktail. The peel was left out in the cold.

I contemplated the frosted glass. Dry Martinis have strong visual attraction. This was no exception. The first sip. The second ... a longer one. It was subtly better than any Dry Martini I'd had before.

"George," I opined, "this is great. Dry, but dry. Yet not harsh. Trade secret I suppose. Not for customer's ear?"

"For you I'll make an exception," George said, surprisingly. "Appreciation brings its own reward. I always use High & Dry for my cocktails. And for all other gin drinks for that matter."

"Incredible!" I said. "To think of all the years I've been drinking—and I've only just discovered how a really good Dry Martini is

"Life's like that," George said bartenderly. "All you have to do is ask for a High & Dry Dry Martini. Specify High & Dry. It's as simple as that. And you'd better have some at home - when you are at home!"

"This is my home now, George," I said. "Just you, me and your superb High & Dry

How far away is New York by great Cunard 'Queen'?

A long weekend

Cunard have revived the long weekend. It starts towards the end of the week, when a great 'Queen' leaves Southampton; and it finishes early the next week, in the heart of New York.

And right in the middle of your crossing: Saturday and Sunday.

It will seem like the shortest long weekend you ever had. Certainly the greatest. For 3 irrefutable reasons: sea, ship and service.

The sea

Vast skies, warm sun, and salt spray. Good health you can reach out and touch.

Your ship

Your 'Queen' has decks the length of a village street. Her engine room generates enough power to light a big county town. She's fast. And smooth.

But mainly Cunard service

Cunard service means many things. Like 5 new films per crossing. The best roast beef you ever tasted, chosen from great international menus.

A splendour of public rooms, and gymnasiums, and swimming pools, and beauty salons, and night clubs, and your ship's own exclusive shopping centre.

Cunard service also means charming, unlikely touches like floral gardens. Thoughtful touches like your ship's own daily newspaper. Fun touches like horse racing.

And it means instant service at the press of a button. Marvellous personal care and attention, often from members of third generation Cunard families.

For with Cunard, you see, service is in the blood.

Some people can't make up their minds which they prefer, speed or a wonderful long weekend. They go one-way Cunard, and one-way B.O.A.C./Cunard.

And get the best of both worlds.

One-way fares by 'Queen' from: First £169

"RESEARCH MAKES THE DIFFERENCE"

A unique system of fitted wardrobe units which allows you to choose interior fittings to meet your own precise needs and position them exactly as you wish

You may start with two or three — add, later, any additional units — and still maintain a single integrated installation. You can reposition the interiors to meet your changing needs. And you can take the entire fitment with you when you move.

Opus 22 is a highly imaginative yet very practical system of storage and bedroom furniture designed to meet any requirement for domestic storage and solve it—beautifully. Yet it is always easily adaptable to your changing needs. All interior and exterior surfaces of the room high wardrobe units are finished in matt white lacquer, with the exception of the doors. These are supplied in American walnut veneers or white. Included in the range are a dressing table, beds, chests of drawers, night tables, mirrors and a series of wall boards to link the individual pieces into a unified scheme. Every order is treated individually, specially packed and installed in the home by an appointed stockist.

If you wish to know more about Opus 22 we will gladly send you a free colour brochure, together with the names of your nearest stockists.

♠ Ken Dodd would probably be the first to acknowledge his debt to a tall bespectacled man with a Birmingham accent: his press agent, George Bartram, a tireless worker with a sharp eye for an exploitable situation. Bartram worked for months to engineer the Prime Minister's widely-publicised visit to the Palladium.

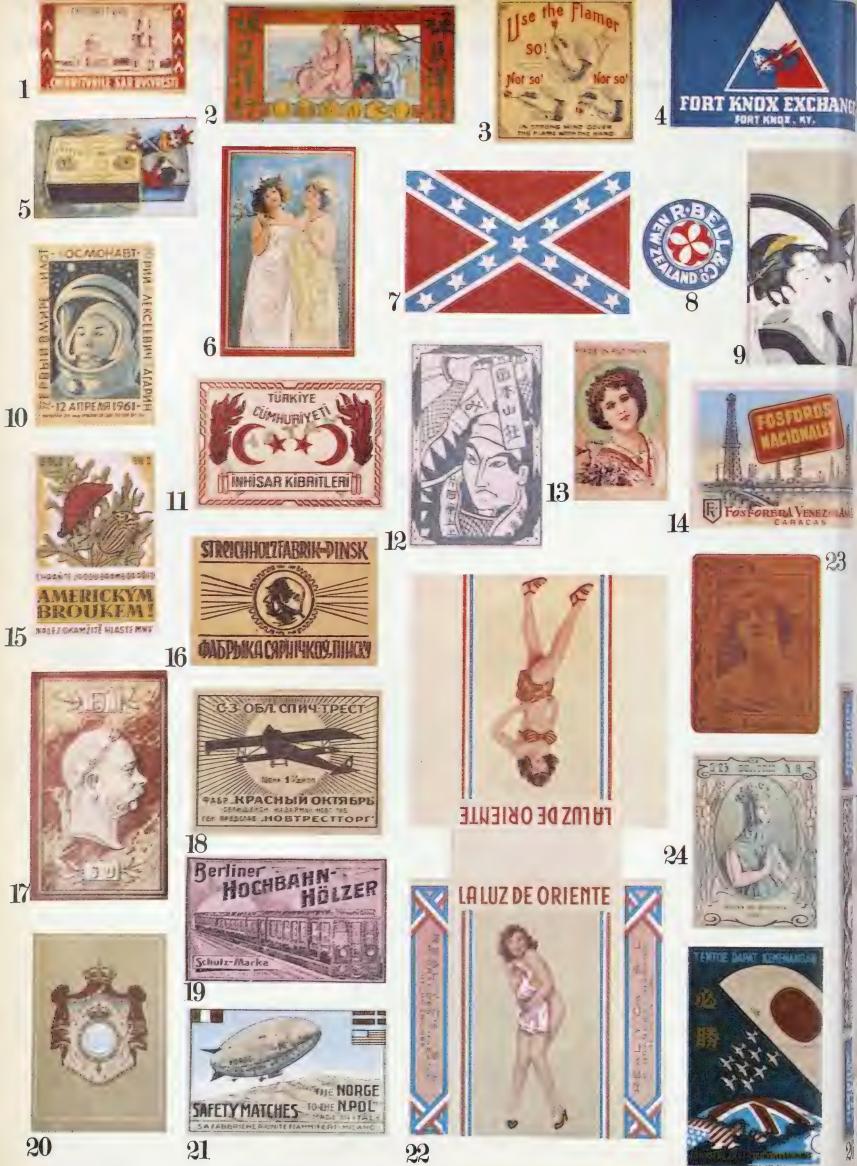

In January, when Dodd was still playing in Liverpool, Bartram asked Mrs. Bessie Braddock, M.P., if she could persuade Mr. Wilson to see the show. Dodd had often done charity shows at Mrs. Braddock's request, so she promised to do what she could. In the following months, Bartram wrote twice to the Prime Minister and also kept nudging Mrs. Braddock. Persistence paid off. One day last month, Mrs. Braddock reported that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson would be going to the show. The exchange of jokes in the comedian's dressing-room duly made the papers. The Dodd cult among the more sophisticated theatregoers is another result of Bartram's opportunism. "I heard that John Osborne had seen Ken's show and had sent the cast from the Royal Court to the Palladium 'to watch a real comedian'," he says. "We saw that this 'in-thing' could become another field. So I wrote to Osborne asking if I could use his visit. Then I began to attack the heavies: the Sunday Times and so on." Whenever he was turned down by one Sunday newspaperman, Bartram calmly tried another. He was eventually rewarded by coverage in both the Observer and the Sunday Times. He also helped Dodd's record Tears towards the top of the pop record charts. He began to operate when the record reached fifth place. "It's no good doing anything until a record's moving," he says. "As soon as this one did, I wrote to the musical journals and to every paper in the country which runs a record column. Now the musical papers ring Ken up every week for a quote on something or other."

Leonard Woolf, who has won this year's £1,000 W. H. Smith book prize for his autobiography, is one of the last of the Bloomsburyites. He is now 84. He comes up to London every Tuesday from Rodmell, his home near Lewes in Sussex, to go to his office at the Hogarth Press, the publishing firm which he founded with Virginia Woolf in 1917. It is now amalgamated with Chatto & Windus. He keeps a pied-à-terre in a house in Victoria Square. Earlier this year, as a member of the board of the New Statesman, he took an active not to say militant part in the selection of a new editor to succeed John Freeman after Mr. Freeman had been appointed our High Commissioner in Delhi, Mr. Woolf has since resigned from the board. The last of the three volumes-Sowing, Growing and Beginning Again-was published last year.

When the German Army seized the Russian city of Pinsk in the Second World War, it made sure that its victory was recorded on the local matchboxes—an example perhaps of German thoroughness, certainly of the peculiar appeal which matchboxes hold as a vehicle for polemic. In 19th-century England they were used for political caricature. In this century the Japanese have used them for wartime propaganda against the Allies, the Russians have used them to celebrate their occupation of Berlin in 1945, and the Czechs have used them to accuse the U.S. Air Force of dropping Colorado Beetle on Czech crops. Today, in a more peaceful Europe, they serve the interests of the innocent nationalism of the tourist business. The matchbox labels reproduced here are from the private collection of Mr. Eric Spencer of South London.

When the Zeffirelli film of Tosca is completed in Rome next month (five weeks shooting is scheduled to start on 20 October), Maria Callas will have given the highest paid performance in the history of opera.

Under her contract, she receives 500,000 dollars (125,000 of this to be paid on signature) and 50 per cent of the profit. Callas's exceptional gifts as an actress and the Hollywoodstyle mystique which her personality has generated should ensure that Tosca is given far wider distribution than the general run of operatic films.

The sound track of the film, with Tito Gobbi as Scarpia, has already been made. It will be taken from her latest Tosca recording, directed by Georges Prêtre, which was made with the possibility of the film in mind. Zeffirelli's principal problem will be to reduce the tremendous impact of her stage presence to the intimate style of the cinema screen. "We are making an entirely new Callas," he said when he was in London last month. He is planning another Callas film of Norma.

He should be in pretty good shape for dealing with the grandes dames of the cinema. His other leading lady, in the film of The Taming of the Shrew, is Elizabeth Taylor, who also tends to be rather well paid for her work.

Ronnie Scott, whose modest basement in Gerrard Street has provided London with much of its best jazz since it was opened six years ago, is moving to a new and larger club in Frith Street before the new year.

"This street is getting a bit punky," he says, "and over there I can get a 3 a.m. licence."

The new club will seat 200, compared with 90 at present. There will be room for dancing.

"It will not be in front of the band, but probably at the end of the room, so that people who want to listen and enjoy the music won't have their view obstructed. It will be structurally more suitable as it is on the ground floor, so there will be a whiff or two of that stuff called fresh air."

"The licence extension is really the most important thing. Many of the fringe crowd don't start going out until 11.30. We intend to keep the prices within everyone's reach. We hope to extend our audience by having special prices for student members of university jazz clubs. What we don't want is to get chi-chi or bring in the

The new club will cost about £8,000.

Hall, had posters printed advertising Mr. Jean Fredericks in Recitals are a Drag, put on a wig and an evening dress which he says once belonged to Florrie Forde, walked on to the stage and began to sing in a falsetto voice. His programme included operatic arias by Gounod, Bizet, Saint-Saens; Lieder by Hugo Wolf; and such standbys as "Come into the Garden, Maud" and "The Merry Merry Pipes of Pan." At first there was little to distinguish the performance from any straight recital; the singer's figure may have been large and her voice a little wobbly at times, but a concert audience is used to such failings on the part of the most serious sopranos. Then gradually the arch looks, anguished grimaces and expansive gestures

"Madame Fredericks" had got totally out of control. She dressed up as Britannia for "Land of Hope and Glory", blew down a trombone for "September in the Rain", brandished a wand for "Nobody Loves a Fairy When She's Forty" At the close of the recital, the audience was calling for an encore. Majestically holding the bouquet which an admirer had sent her, she gave them "Vilia", dead straight. Then her manager made an announcement. An LP recorded during a recent recital at the Chenil Galleries will soon be on sale at all reputable record shops. And on 10 October Jean Fredericks will be appearing at the Lambeth Theatre in Comedy on the Bridge, presented by the Focus Opera Company. He will be singing the bass part...

There will be two new arts programmes on BBC-TV this autumn: Sunday Night on BBC-1 and New Release on BBC-2. Devising and producing New Release is 25-year-old Melvyn Bragg (above), who started on Monitor and went on to produce Writer's World and the successful literary panelgame Take it or Leave it (back this month, too), "I don't think I've really done anything on TV yet," he says, "it's taken me two years to get the hang of it."

New Release can be seen every other Wednesday. It will be 45 minutes long and deal with a variety of topics. The format will remain flexible and the items may vary in length from five to thirty minutes. "It won't be like Huw Wheldon's or Jonathan Miller's Monitor," says Bragg. "It'll have a link man, but it won't be me."

The link man will, in fact, be Julian Jebb, a journalist who is a new face on television. His first appearance will be with the opening issue of the new series on 13 October. Bragg had built the programme round the cancelled production of Strike! at the Aldwych, and the folding of the show put him in a spot. Now the items will include news of the Corot exhibition at the National Gallery, and two short films shot specially for the programme: An Absurd Afternoon with Eugene Ionesco and The Inventions of Dr. Melina-a rocket scientist who is also founder of the Kinetic Art Movement.

Bragg's first novel For Want of a Nail was recently published by Secker & Warburg and has just appeared in America. A second novel has been accepted and he's well into his third, but says he'll try not to give his programme a literary bias. He lives with his French wife Lise and their three-monthold baby by the Underground at Kew, and gives most of his money away to a man who runs an antique shop round the corner.

Michael White is planning a production of de Sade's The Bedroom Philosophers early in the New Year. He bought the rights a year ago, but planned productions have twice been postponed. Now Charles Marowitz will direct it at the Arts Theatre. De Sade's novel was written in dialogue form. White describes it as: Very philosophical and quite obscene by most people's standards." A Paris production was banned because the theatre had no licence. The Arts Theatre is a club, so the Lord Chamberlain can ignore it.

Robert Bolt, whose plays include The Flowering Cherry and A Man for All Seasons, has written one for children. The Thwarting of Baron Bollygrew goes into the Royal Shakespeare Company's repertory for the Christmas season.

John Gale is bringing the Daleks to the Strand Theatre for Christmas. David Whitaker and Terry Nation (who created the TV original) have cooked up The Curse of the Daleks for afternoon performances only. In the evenings, Maigret and the Lady may seem only mildly thrilling.

At a party given by the magazine Encounter recently, Edna O'Brien was introduced to Mr. Ted Heath. For some reason, she thought he was Mr. Ted Hill, former chief of the Boilermakers' Union. "Oh," she remarked as she was introduced, "you can always tell a good union man by his tie."

A rehearsal scene from Strike! the musical which has been cancelled by the Royal Shakespeare Company. It had been intended as a Joan Littlewood-style documentary covering eight years of political and economic unrest from 1918, culminating in the general strike. There would be songs (pop songs of the day with new ironic words), dancing, back projection, film, Peter Hall agreed to the idea and the first act went into rehearsal. It was the work of David Wright and Clive Barker.

But Littlewood-style theatre requires the Littlewood gift for inspired improvisation. With ten days to go to the opening night, Peter Hall returned from holiday and found the final script still unsettled and the director, Trevor Nunn, in hospital with gastroenteritis. Mr. Hall watched a rehearsal, groaned and ordered the production to be scrapped.

This sort of action is not unfamiliar to the Royal Shakespeare Company: the postponement of Schofield's King Lear produced the virtually ad hoc and ultimately sensational Comedy of Errors. And whatever happened to The Merry Wives of Windsor?

But Mr. Wright says: "Peter Hall is probably right to make this heartrending decision. It was touch and go whether it would be ready in time for the schedule. Rehearsal times were ludicrously tight and it would have been put on under-rehearsed. I only hope that in this case postponement doesn't mean cancellation.

Hammer Films are promoting their biggest production to date, One Million Years BC, as "The Mammoth One for 1965". It stars an assortment of dinosaurs and Raquel Welch - shown here

A new shop, Milord, has opened at 7 Denman Street W 1 GER 6122, where Adele Morris offers a cup of coffee by her fire, with advice, "not about what suits someone, but about what goes with what". She is open till six-thirty every evening, until eight on Thursdays. She will send a selection of clothes to an office or home at two hours notice for inspection, within the City-Knightsbridge boundary.

The shop is Continental; there is little for the traditional Englishmen. English leather and suede is sent to France to be made up. Above we show a brown suede casual, car or après-ski coat with a black beaver collar, lined in grey baby kid; which costs 46 guineas, and, below, a pale beige suede coat with a grey possum collar and scarlet Courtelle lining which costs 42 guineas.

There are some classical jackets in British cashmere and lambswool, but most of the knitwear comes from Italy, mainly in scarlet and black, with some in white wool, unashamedly crocheted. Adele Morris has designed evening shirts "not kooky, really beautiful" in guipure lace, with a coloured lining glowing through. Ties are by Dior and Carven, and her own designs in different slubs of colour. "Overall designs are coming back instead of panel ties. I don't want flowered ties.

Sandie Shaw is singing this week at the Olympia, Paris's Palladium. "We've been doing well in America, I thought it was time somebody had a go at France." Still under 19, the girl from Dagenham has had only a year in the business. "Once I went to the seaside with my Mum and Dad and you know those sixpenny recording boxes on the pier, well I went in there and sang Louise Cordet's song 'I'm a Baby, Just a Baby' and they all laughed. They didn't think much of it. My Mum says to me when I've been on the telly, 'Why don't you sing up a bit, Sandra Goodrich, I keep having to get up out of the chair to turn the volume up when you're on.' I know 12 French songs now. And I've done cabaret in Cannes, introducing my songs in French." Petula Clark says: "Parisians are very fickle. Sandie will have a triumph in Paris. But the big French public have to be won over gradually and it's hard work.

Bette Davis continues her profitable career of high-class horror in the titlerole of The Nannie, which is showing at the Carlton Cinema from 7 October. Produced and written by Jimmy Sangster, the film is about a married couple (Wendy Craig and James Villiers) who engage a Nannie for their problem child. Joey has been in a "special" school since his sister died mysteriously two years before. His equivocal relationship with his Nannie is vaguely similar to the central situation of The Turn of the Screw. One of the two is a psychopath: you are expected to stay to the end in order to discover which . . .

This portrait of John Reginald Christie, the Notting Hill Gate murderer, is one of a series on the Christie murders in Brett Whiteley's current show at the Marlborough New London Gallery. "I read about the Christie murders when I was a kid of 11 or 12 at school in Australia," Whiteley says. "When I came to London, I found that my studio was only 500 yards from the house where Christie had lived. The whole area interested me, the way people lived. Christie seemed to represent this in some sort of way. But it's only the subject-matter. It doesn't really matter what you start off with. It's what you make out of it. You start off with a completely designed image and work towards something completely undesigned. It's not what pictures are about, it's why they're being painted.'

The 1964 Olympic Games, held in Tokyo, involved 6000 competitors from 94 nations and 1,900,000 spectators. It has been officially recorded on film in a production appropriately immense. 165 cameramen, 1030 cameras, 20 sound crews, 350 technical aids and 28 directors went to the making of Tokyo Olympiad. It is the first film to use 1600 and 2000 millimetre lenses. 400,000 feet of film were shot-equivalent to 75 hours viewing time. The supervising director was Kon Ichikawa, who made The Burmese Harp and Fires on the Plain. He is 50 years old and this is his ninth film. Some critics consider that it surpasses Leni Riefenstahl's classic record of the Olympic Games at Berlin in 1936. "In this film I have attempted to capture the solemnity of the moment when man defies his limits", Ichikawa has said. "And to express the solitude of the man who, to succeed, fights against himself. I have tried to penetrate human nature not through fiction, but in the truth of the games. The camera must capture, in all its reality, the reflections of the skins of coloured athletes, the blond child-like hair of white athletes in the sun, the sharp piercing look from Oriental eyes " Left: Finalists of the Greco-Roman Wrestling, Uladlen Trostiansky (silver medal) Masamitsu Ichiguchi (gold

CLOSE UP HERMIONE GINGOLD

"I've never been against a double entendre" said Miss Gingold as she slowly dismembered a Dublin Bay prawn. This at least fitted my preconceptions. I'd never met her before this lunch, but I'd seen her many times in revue just after the war, and my memories of her in no way matched up to the conventionally theatrical lady opposite.

I'd recollections of a face which was a comic mask of lubricity, the eyes rolling in delighted outrage, the full lips pouting open to reveal a large and agile tongue like that of a giraffe in rut. "Take those words out of your mouth" she'd intone in that famous and much-imitated drawl. "You don't know where they've been," and vista after deliciously obscene vista opened up. Yet here she was complaining bitterly about contemporary bad taste.

It was eight years since she'd been over here, and she found everything changed and most of it for the worse. That hideous Post Office tower for example, and all those modern plays. Goodness knows she was tolerant sexually, what people did was their own affair; but she'd been to the theatre the other night and seen a play about lesbians in which one lady had ordered her friend to drink her bath water and someone had spat in a hat. And the BBC! She'd heard somebody talking about a car sticker which read 'This car is constipated. It hasn't passed a thing all day'! Well! In the days of her associations with the BBC that would never have been allowed. Furthermore she'd refuse to say things like that if she was asked to. She'd never in public mention going to the lavatory, or halitosis. It was then the double entendre bit came in.

I found myself arguing with her. Defending the Post Office tower for its eccentricity: defending the modern theatre and even the car sticker. She was open to argument. When I brought up Pinter she said she'd seen The Caretaker in New York and thought it brilliant. It hadn't been a success there, though. The theatre in New York was quite different. Its audience was exclusively business gentlemen. When I said that I thought John Osborne was a real patriot she agreed with that too, but added that she disapproved of chauvinism. It was the whole human race that was important. Besides so much of what was going on was so liable to be misunderstood abroad. That terrible young man, the satirist, what was his name? Frost. In such bad taste. And that cabaret which had come to New York, The Establishment. She'd been to the first night, and they'd attacked everything we hold dear, the Queen, the Royal Family, everything. Of course if she'd seen it here she'd have probably laughed like a drain, but in America it gave a very bad impression. Furthermore everyone had watched her to see how she reacted, and then lots of people asked her to go over and over again, and she didn't like to say she'd already seen it. What was worse, after each visit she found she minded it less, and began to enjoy it. Did that mean she was easily corrupted? I said no, that was the whole point of the satirical thing. To make people see what was real and what was conditioned reflex. Perhaps, she said, but the Americans didn't understand this. They thought England was going to the dogs.

I got the impression that she thought of herself as an unofficial ambassadress for Britain. She told me that when she went there she'd been painfully shy, but America had taught her to overcome this. She spoke in public, and appeared frequently on television programmes as a guest.

When I asked her if she'd become an American citizen she said no, of course not. But did she think of New York as her home? Yes. Did she have a flat? In America a flat is a burst tyre. She had a beautiful big apartment on 54th Street with a huge roof garden. She lived quietly with her Yorkshire terriers. It was they who had made her reluctant to come over before, but her housekeeper was looking after them, and she felt she had to appear in dear old London before she was completely for gotten. I told her this would never happen. There were not only her films, but everyone who had seen any of the Swee and Low revues would never forget her. She was a myth. So it would seem. When she'd read Façade at the Albert Hal recently they'd clapped her wildly for several minutes when she'd walked on the stage. It was very touching. She smile and sipped her Guinness.

BY GEORGE MELLY

In confirmation, throughout the meal, people kept coming up to the table and saving how glad they were to see her back. They also said how young she was looking. This is true. She makes no secret of her ageshe is 69—but she could be in her late 40's. This is perhaps part of the reason I found her ideas so surprising. You expect somebody of almost 70 to find the times a little out of joint, but it's confusing if they look under 50. It's not the whole reason, however. It was the recollection of La Gingold, the post-war arbiter of bad taste, which really threw me.

During the days which followed our lunch I spoke to several people who'd known her before she'd gone to America. They confirmed she'd changed, but modified my idea of what she'd been like. "Yes I saw her the other day on television complaining about everything' said one man, "and I thought 'You're being a nuisance dear' ". He added however that she'd never sworn at all and disapproved of drunks. "I'm rather on her side there", he said. "What she was really like", he told me, "was a wicked old queen". His explanation as to why she had changed was that America forces people who go and live there into a role. There are no individuals, he said, only types and it's impossible to step out of character.

This was confirmed by the author of the play she's doing. "We think of her not so much as a clown like you do over here" he told me. "She's more of a character, a little eccentric maybe, but a real lady. She appears on guest shows on TV a great deal, and she's become famous for her impromptu wit". Somebody else gave me an example of this. Apparently she was on with a Frenchman who asked her, in all seriousness, why "you English" had burnt Joan of Arc. Gingold turned to him and explained frostily: "But darling, we were cold, of course".

Nevertheless I was puzzled as to how her persona altered.

Whether it was immediately or slowly. I heard from another American that when she first went to New York she was in a revue which was a great success, and then in another which was a disaster. Everybody can have a flop, but whereas here it doesn't seem to matter, my informant told me that in America it's almost permanent death. There were no more revues, but after a period of obscurity she re-emerged as a film actress and a TV personality. Out of the grotesque husk of 'Toni' Gingold climbed Miss Gingold, wit and actress.

At the lunch, I'd asked her about the play she'd come over to do. The fact of the matter was I didn't know what it was. I'd meant to find out, but had forgotten, so I'd hoped she'd mention the title. She didn't, though. She simply described it as entertaining and glamorous, and said she had beautiful clothes to wear in it, and that though it had strong moments, it was real theatre. Well, what she thought of as real theatre! This was no help. I imagined it must be a wellmade play in the H. M. Tennent tradition. It was a great surprise when I discovered later that it was Dad, Dad etc., a black comedy of the theatre of the absurd. This led me to think that perhaps in the old days she'd never realised just how hilariously disgusting she made everything sound and look. I got hold of some of her sketches. On paper they're pretty thin stuff, and certainly absolutely innocuous, but if the mind's ear added her voice.

they become charged with suggestiveness. The thing is that she was a camp comedienne. This completely suited the period. The gay queer tinselly parochial Shaftesbury Avenue lunch-at-the-Ivy mood was exactly what we all needed to exorcise the gloomy dangerous war and the drab exhausted peace which followed it. She is, it seems, no longer camp. The Queen has become a Duchess. Arthur Kopit, the author of Dad, Dad etc., tells me that she resists all temptation to send up the character she plays though it would be easy enough to do so. "She gives it complete authority," he says. "She knows exactly what she has to do, and she does it. She's like that about everything, I guess".

After our lunch I dropped her at the YWCA in Great Russell Street where she was rehearsing. When I'd gone there to pick her up I'd thought of it as a marvellous joke. Gingold at the YWCA! Now it didn't appear particularly incongruous. She thanked me warmly for the lunch, said she'd been very indiscreet, and hoped I wouldn't write down all she'd said. Well I didn't see she'd been indiscreet at all so I've disobeyed her. I didn't meet the person I expected, but I met a different one whom I disagreed with about almost everything, but liked very much.

In one of her early sketches she portrayed an Edwardian actress being visited by her protector. While she lay on her couch in complete abandon, he consumed her outstretched arm with kisses. Between mouthfuls he called her name, I believe it was Miriam, and told her that she must never change. "Wouldn't that", she queried thoughtfully, "be a little insanitaree?"

And so it might have been in real life too. Gingold has changed.

Hermione Gingold opened on 6 October at the Piccadilly Theatre in Arthur Kopit's play Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and

"Dear Miss O'Brien, I wonder whether you would be interested, would you, in getting to know someone who hasn't read your books, but who likes the look of your photos, and thinks we are perhaps the same sort of person. This is me. 43 years old, schoolteacher (highly unsuccessful in official eyes), working-class upbringing, unusually intelligent, and, I must admit, looking for a woman . . ." This is the beginning of a fan letter to Edna O'Brien (right); she gets many like this, not always so decorous. Her fourth novel, August is a Wicked Month, is out this week. "I write to keep sane", she says, and the extraordinary intensity of this new book does suggest the borderline of breakdown. Indeed, it may be one of the most painful and disturbing books ever written by a woman. She's already at work on a fifth, called Casualties of Peace, and recently completed a film script based on one of her own short stories. Tentatively called Passage of Love, it has been filmed in County Clare by Desmond Daviswho directed an earlier O'Brien script, The Girl With Green Eyes

Corot's Mademoiselle de Foudras, (far right) painted in 1872, is on view in London for the next four weeks in a retrospective exhibition along with some of the artist's less familiar works -notably his salon pictures. Despite changes in public taste Corot has always been highly regarded by other artists. His portrait of Mlle de Foudras is typical of the paintings that had a surprising influence on the Cubist movement at the beginning of this century

The retrospective exhibition of the art of Jean-Baptiste Camille Corot (1796-1876) is at the National Gallery, Trafalgar Square, WC2 (WHI 7618) from 8 Oct to 14 Nov, daily from 10-6, Tue & Thurs 10-9, Sundays 2-6. what they read, think, buy, Even drink. They drink vodka now. Cossack Vodka."

Here a news item, far from squarely presented. Adoption now easier. The supply of illegitimate babies riotously catching up with demand. I make no judgment. I simply feel left out. How, where, do I seize the city? In the post, a publisher's catalogue. A Box of Pin-Ups by

"Together, these 36 photographs make a statement not only about the man who took them, but also about London life in 1965. Many of the people'here have gone all out for the immediate rewards of success: quick fame, quick money, quick sex — a brave thing to do. Glamour dates fast, and it is its ephemeral nature which both attracts Bailey and challenges him. He has tried to capture it on the wing, and his pin-ups have a heroic look: isolated, invulnerable, lost.'

So complete statements, finished assessments of our time, are presented to me. 1965 a legend in 1965, nostalgia already setting in. The swinging city is too swift for me, as I suspect it is for many others. Gaiety and success are so excluding.

UT the word, swinging, does have a meaning. It describes more than the city which produces fashions, plays and songs. It describes a city which has ceased to be the place where I could once work in solitude and peace, processing experience gathered elsewhere. Now the city is more demanding. It requires to be noticed. Peace has to be found elsewhere. Swinging: the word itself, I feel, suggests the nature of the change. It is not a word of the old London, of wigged judges sipping port. Nor is it, strictly, mock-American. It is colonial.

Colonial: the word came to me two years ago in a restaurant in a department store in Guildford. Teatime, in a new building with enormous glass windows, and the embarrassing Guildford models brushing past the tea-tables and displaying, I believe, ski clothes. Not the weary elegance of tea with an author and a mannequin show at Harrod's; not the atmosphere of a restaurant in an Oxford Street or suburban store. Here was a type of self-regarding delight, however suppressed. It was indefinably new. It was familiar to me.

Outside might have been Southern Spain, the West Indies, Africa. But outside was only the old High Street, of Dickensian associations, infernal now with motor vehicles: one disturbance answering another. Colonial, in the sense of people cut off from their roots. It was no doubt part of the excitement of the new Britain, part of what writers had been celebrating for some time. I had accepted what they had said; but had not, until now, felt exposed to it.

Coming back that evening to London by train, seeing only lights and buildings, no long stretches of darkness, I felt I had never really been out of London, that the city had spread all the way to Guildford. No cause for surprise here: I had taken journeys out of London before. I had seen skyscrapers going up here and there, seen road-widenings, the destruction of Marble Arch and Hyde Park Corner. But, secure in Streatham Hill, I had taken the city for granted. Now I was adrift in the city. And, becoming aware of the city as changed and colonial, I began to feel it also as physically oppressive.

London is the district in which we live and the centre we all know. Every unfamiliar district is squalid, a little frightening, and unconvincingly linked to the city we move in. It has to be tamed and charted. I had lived for some years in North London before moving to Streatham Hill. I had overcome its terrors. I had worked well, finding in Streatham Hill the privacy and repose and nearness to the centre that I liked. Then I began to travel. I gave up Streatham Hill and went abroad for 14 months. I came back and found myself adrift in unfamiliar districts. I had broken the pattern of my life in London and it was hard to settle down again. It was like being in the city for the first time.

From N.1. to S.E.23 and S.E.26 the mood persisted. Was it ageing, isolation, the strains of my profession? Possibly; but the external could not be denied. And now at last my unease defined itself. Everything I have read about London since in magazine supplements, or seen on television, every return at night through lighted areas, has strengthened this sense of London as the monster colonial city.

> aving discovered the physical oppressiveness of the city, I was surprised to what an extentit had been des-troyed.Islingtonof the pretty conversions, but set in dust and grime, thundering with factories and traffic. Putney, Fulham, Hammersmith and even Chelsea sterilized—to use the sinister technical word—by traffic and by aeroplanes flying in from Camberwell and Kennington, Wandsworth and Clapham. In the south, away from the air lanes, nearly every road between Forest Hill and Crystal Palace a main road. The aim is always to spread disturbance rather than limit it. A map ought to be made showing the sterilized areas of London: it will be very frightening.

In a few years it will seem strange that this avoidable destruction was encouraged. that no new municipal code had been worked out to meet the new circumstances. There is no satisfying definition of a residential area. The public highway has not been redefined. Lorries can go everywhere. Motorcars can be tested in any residential street at any time of day or night. A backyard workshop can hum like a factory, with its electrical saws and drills. Church halls, with God as Pop figure, are places of singular threat. Radio and television sets appear to have no prescribed limit to their volume. It will seem inconceivable, above all, that barbarities like motorbikes and sports-cars were permitted, and that while the BMA was saying that the level of noise in some parts of London had already gone beyond the safe, London Airport was being enlarged, to accommodate the traffic that was expected to double in five years.

I think it will be seen that no new municipal code was devised because in the emancipated swinging society of the 60's, which was also the revenge society, there was a genuine urge to destroy and that noise, the possession of powerful instruments, musical or otherwise, was the most satisfying expression of that urge. Study the face of the man on an unsilenced motorbike or behind the wheel of a souped-up Mini; study the face of the man in a second-hand two-toned car. They are not the faces of men who wish to hear only the ticking of the clock at 90 miles an hour. Noise is emancipation of this sort, this wiping out of a past of class deprivations. Noise is gadgets, no longer purely of America. Noise is the measure of the booming city: dig we must, for a greater London. Noise is change. Noise is, above all, the motorcar. To accommodate it the city must be destroyed.

tifying assumption has been made that. in the hands of the masses, the motorcar is a means of transport. The motorcar has wheels, it is true, and can be guided even by the very simple, alas, from point to point. But no one believes that the motorbike, which also moves, is a means of transport. Why the motorcar? This ingenuousness will puzzle future generations. The age is literal, but perhaps not literal enough. The traffic survey shows that at a certain time motorcars are going from one point to another. The survey will not show that the people inside these cars are not going anywhere, that they are simply being in their cars. It will not show that the traffic jam is an end in itself, the last communal activity of people

HE private mo-

isolated in the super-community of the city, an activity celebrated every weekend on radio and television and in the newspapers; and that the unblocking of these jams holds deep social dangers. Widen the roads, destroy the towns and the countryside. What then? The motorcars will have to prove that they have a purpose. The resulting communal nervous breakdown in the lower reaches of society is too terrible to think about.

The motorcar is no more a means of transport than the motorbike. It is something to be parked outside the house; it is something to be decorated in the American Negro way for the American Negro's reasons; it is something to be taken out at the end of every untaxing day. It gives a false sense of purpose. In the emancipated state it induces a sweet and necessary sense of persecution. It makes discontent external and confines it. Those happy people on television are always saying they pay so much and get so little in return. So it is: the wreckers are always victims. So much! So little, rather, for the therapy of a massive, continuing destruction.

Therapy: as a political issue, the motorcar is as important as the Health Service. Is it true, the Minister of Transport was asked some time ago on television, that the Labour Government was against motorists, as some motorists had been saying? This was hardly possible, the Minister replied; many of the new motorists were Labour supporters. I didn't feel they were talking about the motorcar as a means of transport.

A mob does not need to burn a city down to be a mob, to demonstrate that it exercises some sort of physical control over its environment. London is effectively possessed by its mob. The motorcarisits weapon of offence. To me it is, as much as anything else, the symbol of the swinging city. It stands for emancipation from the past, for self-assertion, for a zestful, blind iconoclasm. It is part of a larger irresponsibility. These are attitudes which anyone who has been in a colony immediately after independence will recognise.

O this London, to me so changed, had become in some ways familiar. Pop songs, pop art, pop politics. Even racial politics, with which I had grown up: they brought their familiar squalor, they gave that feeling of weariness. And again and again I came back to the physical oppressiveness of the city. It was hard not to react to that, not to be subject to the hundred minute, consuming irritations of the swinging, dinning, poisoned city. The exposed towers of Loughborough Junction and Pimlico: once, seen from Southern Region trains, they had been studied only for their size. Now, how they oppressed the spirit!

In this city I required dark, thick-walled, protecting rooms. It seemed I could only find glass, the flimsiness of a new domestic architecture which thought of itself as modern and clean and go-ahead but was in reality fussy and gaudy, and unsuitable. But of its time. I looked back to Streatham Hill as to a golden period. An ordinary suburban Edwardian street of semi-detached houses: but work had been possible there. Now Streatham Hill itself had altered. Aeroplanes made circles in the sky, waiting their turn to land at London Airport: the quiet street had become a feeder for the main road, now impossible, where the theatre had been replaced by a bowling alley or bingo

I came to rest in Stockwell, S.W.9, central, green and in parts still fairly quiet. I thought I had discovered the area; I find myself in a little community. To avert the evil eye, we prophesy disaster. I have a neighbour who says that every building of merit in London ought to be pulled down, that the roads ought to be clogged with motorcars until they can take no more. This, he says, will more accurately represent the times than any attempt at preservation. He overstates. He has nothing against the times. He is only expressing the insecurity of the city-dweller whose environment might at any time be destroyed. The hall.

"council", all over London, object of terror: tribunes of the people, the dumb millions in their little cars, tribunes working from facts and figures, building flats on private gardens, widening roads, diverting traffic, decreeing a car-park here, sending in the pneumatic drills there. And when the pneumatic drills move in, they never leave. If you live in the city you cannot escape the city. You may not go to Loughborough Junction. But in time it will come to you. There is something a little wistful about those who, ignoring the destruction outside, the Minis and the lorries and the bikes and the second-hand two-toned cars, seek solace in Georgian interiors.

ARLIER this year I went away again for a little. In a colonial town I met a writer whose movements about the world had some resemblance to mine. We talked about London. He returned before me, and from London wrote a letter. "I think it's London for you, boy: the most synthetic, the most New World of the societies which still have an idea what they care about when they care about excellence." He was a colonial like myself. He was reacting to what was colonial in the new, "synthetic" society. It was the excitement of instability, the rejection of something fixed, the attempt to replace it by something else not yet formulated. It was precisely this instability, though, which I had tried to get away from.

But London was also more than colonial. It was big, it was generous, it cared about excellence and, caring, it extended you. These were the qualities of a stable, metropolitan culture which had drawn colonial artists to it throughout the century. Does one London cancel out the other? I cannot say. I know only that I wish I could walk through other streets. I wish I could keep London and walk through streets unpossessed by the mob. I feel that the London I remain loyal to becomes more and more an idea. This city will not swing for me.

BABYSITTING

UNIVERSAL AUNTS. 36 Walpole Street, SW3, SLO 9834. (Babysitting department: Mrs. Billiter.)

Babysitters: about 100 covering mainly central London, including Richmond, Putney, Twickenham, Harrow, Wembley, but not many in South-East. Type of person: emphasis on experience with children, must have had them or looked after them. Two references taken up. Specially experienced nannies and nurses always sent to baby under 12 months old. Universal Aunts guarantee babysitters; all given personal interviews. Bookings: Will take bookings up to two months ahead. Can usually cope with a booking made up till 5 pm, but longer preferred. Confirmation: immediate. Name of babysitter given to mother on 'phone. Conditions: Cannot go where there is infection. A babysitter will do what the mother normally does for her children, but not family washing and ironing. Food is a matter of being reasonable. A taxi or transport to be provided for the babysitter if too late for public transport. Fees: Booking fee of 3s 6d each time; then 4s an hour for one to three children, 5s an hour for four, 5s an hour after midnight. Other services: Extensive. Will supply a nanny for the day, cost 2 gns. Have "proxy parents" who will go to a home only when a mother is not there, and who take charge completely for 24 hours. Cost, between 10 and 12 gns a week, plus gns booking fee for first week, 1 gn for each week after that up to four weeks. Best to book ahead, proxy parents are often booked up a month in advance. Two months notice is safest. 2 gns for 24 hour day plus 1 gn booking fee. 4 gns for 2 day weekend. Also have an "escort service" for children or foreign students whose parents are abroad or unable to meet them. Children met off plane or train, entertained, put up for night by "aunts". About 50 aunts look after the school rush six times a year; adequate notice—four weeks if possible-requested. Overnight care of children costs 35s. For meeting, an aunt gets a minimum fee of £2 for 1-3 hours, 12s an hour after that plus expenses. Extra on Sundays and Bank Holidays, and time-and-a-half if more than 2 children. A service is available in Paris, too, the rates a little higher. Dog sitters and even parrot sitters provided. Summary: The most versatile. Universal Aunts are used to coping with all sorts of emergencies, in a really "auntlike" way. A profitmaking organisation, but with pictures of 1920's and 1930's aunts all round its walls, and an emphasis on personal service. Take great trouble, and would not want to see their quality lose out to quantity; do not want to expand indefinitely. Inspire great confidence. Cheapest, per hour, for bookings of four hours and more (but not for all night), and for three children.

BABYMINDERS. 126 Wigmore Street, W1, WEL 3515. (Run by Mr. C. Rowe. Licensed by City of Westminster.)

Babysitters: About 200 babysitters cover London; boundaries are the North Circular Rd., Ealing and Acton in West, Wimbledon in South, and the City for East. Babysitters are coded under trained, nannies, student doctors and nurses, and others. None is under 21 unless a student doctor or nurse. A trained person sent to babies under 6 months. It has been found impractical to charge more for someone trained, because a client will then ask for "someone specially good who is not trained". The first prejudice in favour of an older woman is often changed once they know a younger woman. Sitters are asked for two references, which are available for inspection, and an interview. Bookings: Notice of between two weeks and two days preferred, but will try to cope at 15 minutes' notice. Open until 7 pm weekdays, 5.30 pm on Saturdays. They have fewer daytime sitters, and need more notice for daytime bookings. Confirmation: By telephone from agency, the sitter brings a personal card with her. Conditions: Cannot go where illness or infection. Minimum booking is three hours. A "light meal" appreciated if bookings more than five hours, or before 7 pm. Parents to pay babysitters' fares, and to supply transport or a taxi when public transport finishes. Fees: Initial fee on first booking only 5s. Then 5s an hour for evening, 5s 6d an hour for day, for two children, then add 6d for each extra child. No extra charge after midnight. Gift vouchers available. Other services: Overnight babysitter, to sleep in, 7 pm-9 am, 35s. Also supply a weekend booking, Friday-Sunday, or Saturday-Sunday. Summary: The only agency devoted exclusively to babysitting, though they plan another branch. Specially well-prepared for an emergency: babysitters instructed to take down parents phone number, if one is available, and that of the family doctor. They have access to a night emergency medical relief service, if all else fails. Mr. Rowe realises his costs may seem high, but his rates have only increased by 1s in six years. "See if you can do it for less". His babysitters go to all types of homes. "from a floating yacht to a Dormobile in Piccadilly Circus". His regular clients tend to be in the upper-income brackets. He emphasises that he is dealing with people, and says that parents who find 5s too expensive, are quite as likely to find 3s 6d too expensive. The best for last-minute bookings, switchboard seldom jammed, best for overnight bookings, bestequipped for an emergency. Best value for bookings under four hours and over three.

When Lady Cynthia Asquith died in 1960, a remarkable document was found among her papers: her diary, begun in 1915 and maintained, day by day, until her death. Longer than the Bible, the manuscript runs to more than a million words. The later entries are comparatively terse and unrevealing, but in the early years she wrote as fully and frankly as Boswell or Pepys. In particular, the period of the first World War is covered in fascinating detail.

Born Lady Cynthia Charteris, daughter of the 11th Earl of Wemyss, the diarist belonged to that legendary generation of privileged and talented people who came of age in the pre-war years. Two of her brothers and many of her friends were killed during that war. The diary provides a poignant (because immediate and spontaneous) record of this devastating experience. But it also gives a richly comic illustration of another aspect of the home front: spy scares and elaborate practical jokes, scandalous rumours and social life carrying on its "business as usual" with a forced and hysterical gaiety. This extract is an example of the latter.

In 1917, Cynthia Asquith was a beautiful and intelligent woman of 30, with two young sons and a husband at the front. She had been married for seven years to "Beb", the second son of Herbert Henry Asquith (who had been Prime Minister from April 1908 to December 1916). She was therefore at the centre of political and social life. But her main interests were literary—writers and writing always had a glamour for Cynthia Asquith.

Her two most spectacular literary relationships illustrate the versatility of her sympathies and taste, for they could hardly be more different: D. H. Lawrence and Sir James Barrie. She was an early friend and supporter of Lawrence, and some of his most interesting letters are addressed to her. Later she became private secretary to Barrie, who valued her friendship so greatly that he made her his principal heir. Her own literary activities were varied: she did a lot of journalistic work, edited a famous series of children's stories and ghost stories, wrote two indifferent novels and three entertaining volumes of reminiscence. Her most distinguished book was her last—an excellent biography of Countess Tolstoi. Shortly before her death she made a sensational appearance on television, when she twice survived the ordeal of a searching quiz on the novels of Jane Austen.

But nothing that she published during her lifetime can compare in interest and quality to the monumental achievement of the diary, which is both an honest self-portrait and a witty account of her time. Much of it is too private for publication even now. As with all diaries, its effect is accumulative, and no short sample can adequately represent it. This one has been chosen for its comedy and for the startling picture that it provides of wartime party-giving.

lovely day. Oggie and Diana joined us at breakfast in amazing dressing gowns. We sat out on the lawn—read a little South Wind aloud and each tried to paint a landscape under Steer's patronage. Captains Festin and Davies came to luncheon and Mary and I played four very amusing games of tennis with them. I gambled and won 11s. It was disgraceful how much my play improved when we had money on. Margot is very ill and, in fairly acute irritation against Diana. A quartette arrived for the weekend. I suppose it's a questionable point in wartime whether it isn't too much of a luxe to pay them a hundred pounds to come down here and play to a handful of people who could all hear them in London. I sat between/continued on page 62 two of them. They were very shy and common. It was a great luxury taking one's music lying down on sofas—a real Roman Empire touch. Margot, Oggie, Mary and I had arranged to sleep out and Hugo Rumbold joined the party. Diana and Alan came and tucked us up. Hugo Rumbold was incredibly funny doing a ward "sister"—he was very vulgar, talking of bowels, obstetrics and the "bottle" for Captain Belcher—but irresistibly funny. At about one o'clock we were still very wide awake when I suddenly saw a flare of light and then to my amazement and delight rocket after rocket went up into the air just in front of us. Oggie (who was in a crib) wailed "I can't get out-I can't get out"and Diana immediately popped her head out of the window. Whose joke was it? danced through one's brain at once. First I suspected Diana and Alan-then Hugo-then I remembered that Captain Festin, etc., had said they were expecting a Zeppelin raid. But the fireworks were obviously ascending, not descending. Hugo began talking very melodramatically about for God's sake keep the women quiet!-and murmuring about an escaped German prisoner. Steer came looming out and between them they drove us in. Oggie was on the verge of hysterics—Margot apparently petrified—and Mary talking rather big in a quavering voice about going to the stables to call the men up. We had a wonderful "meet" in Diana's bedroom-she in glittering demi-toilette-rouged and powdered—Alan dressed all but his tie—Steer a study in Jaeger— Hugo in a "fancy" dressing gown—I in a ragged pigtail and all of us in various degrees of nakedness and disorder. Scotta wonderful mauve apparition was found in the passage. Every conjecture was bandied about. Zeppelin? We must have heard it? Escaped prisoner?-wouldn't the searchers come and warn us before fireworking on our tennis court? Practical joke—whose? The officers? Alan was positive it could not be a practical joke as it would be a serious offence under the Defence of the Realm Act. Each in turn was accused of being au fait either because they did or did not exhibit fear. My imagination failed me-and I was as cool as a cucumber and happily amused —only I was very puzzled. All was quiet and we went out again. We saw lights unnoticed before. (We afterwards learned they were quite normal.) I saw a light moving in the garden -but it disappeared. It was huge fun-Margot was in a hysterical condition. Finally we left Oggie and Alan in Diana's room and the rest of us congregated in Margot's bedroomshe getting between the sheets. I fetched brandy-and Scrubb's ammonia as refreshments. Steer had delicious giggles. Altogether it was a perfect sight and farce. It was then that they confessed to me that it was a joke and that I was the only person in the room who didn't know-but that Diana, Oggie and Alan were in the dark and-what is more-were never to know as Margot said Oggie would never forgive her for having allowed her to be frightened. It was the rector uncle and Captain Festin, etc., and had been planned for weeks. I must say a most successful and excellent joke. Margot and Mary acted wonderfully —I thought them terrified. They perjured themselves, etc. Margot confessed to me by saying: "We arranged it with them and they want to come in and have a drink." The climax of comedy was reached when Captain Festin was brought in covered with mud from crawling in the garden and bringing with him another officer, a complete stranger, who was introduced to Margot in bed. Oggie was then heard coming along and we had to conceal Festin in Mary's bathroom. I stayed and slept with Mary for what remained of the night.

Saturday, September 22nd, 1917

Diana announced herself bilious and stayed in bed till after luncheon. She was in a wonderful green chiffon confection and held a levée. Even Cyril Scott was at her bedside—why admit a disliked stranger? I deprecate the bedroom habit. She was in great difficulty as to the composition of a telegram to her bereaved aunt, Lady Robert Manners.

Mary and I went for a ride together. We discussed the ethics of wartime entertaining in relation to Margot. I think the role of the notoriously rich is a very difficult one in wartime. People are quick to say private stinginess is cloaking itself under the pretence of patriotism. Viola arrived in the afternoon-looking wonderfully large-loosesurprised-and disordered. She fluctuates between Botticelli and German looks. She sang in the chapel to the organ. Diana stitches away busily at a glorification of a blanket she has invented for herself. I don't believe she leaves a moment of her life unused. Dear little Willie de Grunne arrived before dinner. Hugo Rumbold appeared, brilliantly, horribly, subtly disguised as a Russian-an opaque grey with a built-on-to nose. He had that awful pâté de foie gras look of a depraved foreigner. I sat beside him and he did the most brilliant stunts all the way through-talking in character first in Russian English and then in Italian English. Diana acted as Impresario giving him his cues. The quartette played to us again. Diana lay glimmering on a sofa with Alan clasping her foot all the time. Mary was travelling up to London by a train leaving Chester at an unearthly hour. Margot and I were foolishly determined to escort her. A hired Ford car had been ordered but there was a ridiculous mistake and instead of that the luggage van came round-a sort of Black Maria minus seats, springs or much air. However, we stuck to our plan and had an excessively uncomfortable drive-but it was rather fun. We left poor |continued on page 64

Woke as usual-but stayed in bed late. Willie made one of his best pigeon English remarks at luncheon: "A simple night in a foreign bed makes me quite tired." The four sport officers, perpetrators of the practical joke, came over to luncheon and kept up with a vengeance giving a surprising exhibition of skill in acting-simulation and dissimulation. They coolly denied any responsibility but let fall clever hints as to there having been something up about which they were not allowed to tell us. They laid it on very thick to poor Oggie whose trepidation increased and increased. She was afraid there might be unexploded bombs in the garden. It was the only topic all the way through luncheon. I got quite bewildered as to who knew everything and who knew partly, and I had no conception people could lie so well. The only remaining butts completely in the dark were Diana, Alan, Viola and Oggie. Willie and I went for a long ride in the afternoon. We found divine views and I enjoyed it very much. He confided to me that he had one and one only great romance in his life. He had been madly in love with and engaged to a lovely girl who was subsequently forbidden to marry by doctors. We came home to a late tea and found the night raid discussion raging. Alan withered me with

tain it was a joke-utterly poopoohing such a possibility. Diana had rung Lord French up on the telephone, but the beloved rector uncle had the call stopped. Margot, without confessing her own implication or official cognizance, tried to convey her certainty as to its being a joke to Oggie-but she refused to receive the impression-and got into her head the idea that Margot was trying to suppress a scare. The rector, Hugo, Steer and I had a conversation round Margot's bedside as to the best dénouement. We were all getting alarmed as to what reception the joke would receive from the butts. The officers were very uneasy and begged us to preserve the mystery until after they had had their dinner. Margot still clung to the determination that Oggie must never know that she was in the joke all the time. More and more lies had to be poured out-Oggie was prepared to bet anything on its not being a joke-Margot laid her a thousand to one that it was; but even this failed to convince her. We sat through dinner in great excitement. The rector was called away to the telephone and came back and told the others they were all summoned back to the camp. They all got up with blue faces and sloped solemnly away. Alan with pale triumph said, "Well, Cynthia—I suppose you think this is a joke too: you are an extraordinary woman." A note was then brought in to Margot -she read it aloud: "We have to apologise for having made a wanton attack on the castle at a quarter to one on Friday night." A very |continued on page 67

"Diana was gorgeous": Lady Diana Manners

continued/ artistically wound-up practical joke! It couldn't have been better done.

However, the situation became damned uncomfortable -Viola went brown, Alan green with rage. We were so terribly anxious that the officers' feelings shouldn't be hurt by any sense of floater. Diana was gorgeous -generously acknowledging the excellence of the joke and redeeming the situation by her energy and address. The Parsons were—I regret to say -very rude. When we women went into the drawing-room one of these guite incredible doe-scenes occurred.

At the time one could scarcely credit one's senses. seems incredible that such things could have been said. Viola and Oggie both tearfully clamoured that it was the most awful breach of taste and talked with wild confusion about jokes about death in wartime-frightening women and children, etc. Viola gave an incredible exhibition of lack of humour and hystericalmindedness-I think she minded her Alan being made ridiculous and kept reiterating that his "good mind" had thought it dangerous and that he knew about the possibilities of local raids because he saw all the telegrams. The worst of it was that she claimed me as an ally, saying, "I know Cynthia feels it too-I saw her face when the telephone message came." This I had firmly to repudiate. She reached her climax by saying, "It's our German blood, Oggie -that makes us feel differently to that lot-the spirit which makes such a thing possible to English officers couldn't possibly exist in Germany and that is why they are winning the war!" Was there ever a more preposterous remark? Oggie was stung to the quick by this mutual claim and said she wished she had had someone killed in the war. We tried to point out to Viola that it was not for us to dictate what was good war taste to muchdecorated war heroes. If it appealed to their sense of humour it was full justification. Someone said if Margot and Cynthia, who have both got their husbands in the trenches, don't mind why should others be more sensitive? Oggie was much more reasonable as to the men's part, but poor thing she was bitterly hurt with Margot, saying she could never forgive her for having deceived her and allowed her to be frightened |continued on tage 68

continued/ for so long. Finally poor Margot rushed sobbing from the room. Diana and I revived her with brandy and powder. I suppose most successful practical jokes involve tearshed-but never have I seen such a tragi-comedy as this. The leer and lurch it has developed in darling Steer is too wonderful. When the men came out the concert began. In the middle of it poor little Oggie rushed sobbing from the room. Diana was magnificent, thanking and applauding the perpetrators profusely. I love that old sport of a rector. Fancy, he tells me that after the explosions when I went out to reconnoitre with Alan-I actually touched his face where he was crouching in the dark. Hugo and Willie were convulsed at my account of the doe-scene.

"Alan green with rage": Alan Parsons

We cheered the officers when they left and I hope they were easy in their minds-I'm afraid Alan rather damped themthey asked Margot to stop his tongue as he might do Captain Festin (the only permanent soldier amongst them) harm. We had some songs when the quartette stopped. Finally large gathering first in Margot's and then in Oggie's bedroom with ceaseless recriminations, explanations and Jeremiads. Diana was flitting about looking dazzling in a very transparent bright green nightdress. Some more good English from Willie-"Goodnight Virgins" to Margot and Finally poor Oggie I believe (this was after I went to bed at two) had practically a fit. She had taken a good deal of medicinal brandy in the course of the evening. Margot had her to sleep with her and a reconciliation was effected. God what an evening! I wish I could have written a proper account of it!

Monday, September 24th, 1917

Stayed in bed all day with visits from Margot, Diana, and Viola and Oggie. The joke was dropped as a topic of conversation. Poor Margot very tired. She complained of Oggie's henpecking. They had a great "stunt" on all the morning—dressing up in armour etc., /continued on page 70 continued/ and being photographed in scenes. I was amused to hear from Margot that Steer was very tired by the high pressure-stunt-weary and irritated by Alan who apparently left him to do all the fetching and carrying for the photography. He made a sort of declaration to Margot when she was sitting to him—saying he liked her better than any other woman and wished he were a foreigner like Willie so that he would have the nerve to kiss her hand. She was very touched. I wrote a good many letters in bed and read Johnson.

I sat between Hugo R. and Steer at dinner. I like Hugo very much-having had a faint prejudice against him before. I believe he is very vicious but his manners are refreshing after Alan's complete lack. Margot had a week's tête-à-tête with him and is very fond of him. He made her a declaration but took her hint and gave no further trouble. We played the analogy game after dinner. I was tired. All I can remember is for "illness if any?"—"Glands" for Hugo. Forstreet-"Baker Street" for Mary. For fruit—"Custard apple" for Diana. For appurtenances—"favourite nail-brush" for McEvoy and "favourite sponge" for Steer.

No "stunt" in the morning. Everybody stayed in bed late. At lunch the American newspaper on Iris Tree was quoted. It's a good bit of journalese—"Actor's daughter—genius too—eulogizes Ford in verse form."

I watched Steer painting Margot. He is a darling that man—we teased him, urging him to matrimony. He made a delicious remark about Mary: "It's funny, I'm so fond of Mrs. Herbert-but I haven't ever dreamt about her." Played table football with Alan, Viola and Diana. Read "Trial of Mrs. Maybrick" aloud to Viola. Played with Michael after tea. Oggie and Viola came to see him in his bath and Margot looked in with a woman whom she introduced as Mrs. Lovat. "A wonderful mauve apparition": Cyril Scott continued/ night. I didn't look at her very carefully—she struck me as dark and rather handsome. I saw her again talking to Margot in the drawing-room and then again in her sittingroom. I found a note from Steer suggesting a walk. Very much flattered I scurried down. It was late and I was tired so I proposed taking our walk comfortably sitting on a sofa in the billiard-room. We had a delightful talk. Scott came in and exclaimed about the newcomer Mrs. Lovat's size. I hadn't been so specially struck with it. The rector uncle, Davies, Festin and a strange officer came to dinner. I sat between Festin and Scott and was irritated by the latter's obvious absorption in Mrs. Lovat who was sitting just opposite. He scarcely took his eyes off her. I didn't take very careful stock of her-I thought her clothes rather tedious and was conscious of faint hostility and dimly registered her as a "man's woman". I wasn't much struck by her voice when she leant across the table and said "I hope you are going to let us have some music, Mr. Scott." As I left the dining-room Diana whispered, "It's Hugo dressedup." At first I thought she was jestingly commenting on a likeness-but sure enough we were up against another practical joke and a very brilliant one. Hugo had said goodbye to us all after luncheon and had driven off to the station with empty boxes. Oggie went with him and bought a wig-he slunk back into the house and put on first Margot's day and then her evening clothes. It was a miracle —his figure was perfect—his beet quite unnoticeable—and his décolletage very enviable. On closer scrutiny I found he made an amazingly attractive wor lan —lovely gentle languid sad yes and such a pretty mouth. There was a very strong resemblance to Muriel Beckett. His walk and general technique were quite admirable. Certainly he is a most remarkable actor. The only person who recognized him was Cyril Scott. He was in it all the time so I feel less mortified by his inattentiveness at dinner. The funny thing was that Viola fell wildly in love with Hugo in this guise-she said she had never felt such passion for anyone else but Alan. Hugo wants this joke not to be talked about—as he thinks it would do him no good in the Guards—it would be considered too typical considering that at the age of 21 when he was Cavalier to some lady he went abroad with her for six weeks disguised as a lady friend of hers. This story is true: the garbled version is that he went with Baroness D'Erlanger as her maid. We played a little bad Poker-I lost 10s. Diana and Viola did some very good imitations and Steer—to my surprise—a brilliant one of George Moore. Terribly late going to bed again.

Appointments at STUDIO OFFICE HOME

Watch for the display "One Hundred Years of Bassano Portraiture" at Kodak Ltd., Regent Street in October

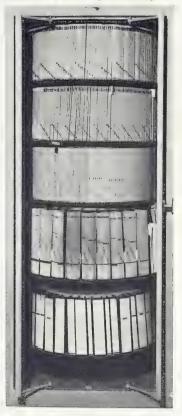

Two exhibitions are running currently in neighbouring parts of London; the Autumn Antiques Fair at Chelsea Old Town and the Business Efficiency Exhibition at Olympia. They have more in common than one might suppose at first look-what we call antiques, after all, were originally designed to carry out an efficient and functional purpose. They were made to work and they've gone on working, otherwise someone would have thrown them away years ago. At Chelsea W R Harvey & Co. are exhibiting a Regency library armchair which unfolds to make library steps, and it is as functional and crisp as any dualpurpose piece of furniture designed today. Mr Cyril Devere Green, founder of the Musical Box Society of Great Britain, has lent a collection of 280 antique musical boxes, frail delicatelooking objects that have sturdily stood up to nearly 100 years' use.

Nearly 200 new products are on view at the Business Efficiency Exhibition; they range from a pocket paging system, the first, they say, to incorporate a twoway speech facility between pocket transceivers, to a personal desk-side shredder for confidential documents and the world's first touch-dial telephone. Many of these products looks as interesting as they act, and stand a pretty good chance of turning up in antique fairs of the future. The message seems to be, hang on to that dictaphone/filing cabinet/waste-paper-basket-yourgrandchildren may put it, interestingly lit, in a prominent corner of their sitting room.

The Business Efficiency Exhibition. Olympia, 4-13 Oct, 10 a m to 6 30 p m, except Saturday 9 Oct, 10 a m to 4 p m. Admission 3s 6d. Visited last year by 104,000 people.

Autumn Antiques Fair, Chelsea Old Town Hall, 6-16 Oct, 11 am to 730 pm. Admission 4s, opening day 5s. Visited annually by 10,000 people. Above: This piano-shaped necessaire was designed in France in 1830 for the housewife who liked music while she sewed. It incorporates a fully working music box, a neatly fitted accessories tray. At the Autumn Antiques Fair. Below: A circular filing system, circa 1965, from Scanex Ltd. Details to be noted are the intricate patterns of each tier, the fingertip ease in finding each file. It currently costs £109 plus the cost of the files—goodness knows what it'll fetch at Sotheby's in 200 years.

This is Sir Ernest Gowers

His newly published revision of H. W. Fowler's classic Dictionary of Modern English Usage is on sale in bookshops everywhere. For 25s you buy the combined wi and wisdom of two highly civilized, urbanely cultivated, minds. Few books are better value. Perhaps none other is a more reliable guide to the easy and correct use of English in speech and writing. For those who enjoy the pleasures of conversation and of reading, and for letter-writers who like their language to match the distinction of their writing paper, Fowler-Gowers is a good companion—and an immensely stimulating and entertaining one. You'll find the secret of Schhh in everything made by You-Know-Who

But is it that simple?

It was clever of You-Know-Who to disperse the secret of Schhh into millions of bottles of Tonic Water, and sell it in pubs and off-licences like any ordinary drink. And it might have been a master-stroke, if the secret were not so laughably apparent by its brilliant effects on gin or vodka . . . It leads one to wonder—if the secret of Schhh has this effect on spirits, what must its ultimate effect be on whatever it was designed for (on you, for instance).
